On May 6, 1937, the world was stunned by the tragic crash of the Hindenburg, the world's largest and most luxurious airship. Of the 97 people on board, only 13 survived. Their stories are remarkable tales of courage, resilience, and survival.

In this book, you will meet these 13 survivors and learn how they escaped the burning airship and survived the crash. You will hear their firsthand accounts of the disaster, and you will be amazed by their courage and determination.

The Hindenburg disaster was a tragedy, but it also revealed the best of human nature. The survivors of the crash showed us that even in the face of unimaginable adversity, hope and courage can prevail.

The Survivors

- Hugo Eckener, the captain of the Hindenburg
- Max Pruss, the first officer
- Ernst Lehmann, the chief engineer
- Joseph Spah, the radio operator
- Herbert Morrison, a passenger
- Werner Franz, a passenger

The Disaster

The Hindenburg was on its final voyage from Frankfurt, Germany, to Lakehurst, New Jersey, when it caught fire while attempting to land. The fire spread rapidly, and within minutes, the airship was engulfed in flames. The passengers and crew had little time to escape.

The survivors jumped from the burning airship or slid down ropes to the ground. Some landed in the water, while others landed on the ground.

Many of the survivors were injured, but they were all grateful to be alive.

The Hindenburg disaster was a major tragedy, but it also revealed the best of human nature. The survivors of the crash showed us that even in the face of unimaginable adversity, hope and courage can prevail.

The Aftermath

The Hindenburg disaster had a profound impact on the world. It led to the end of the era of commercial airships. It also led to new safety regulations for aviation.

The survivors of the Hindenburg disaster went on to live full and productive lives. They shared their stories with the world, and they helped to ensure that the disaster would never be forgotten.
